Dragons! Dragons! Dragons!

by Feana Tu'akoi
illustrated by Donovan Bixley

Four fiery dragons
lived in a cave
near a town.
They were very lonely.
“We need to make some friends,”
they said.

The dragons flew down to the skate park.

The people jumped off their skateboards.

“Dragons! Dragons! Dragons!” they screamed.

“Run for your lives!”

“No friends here,” said Dora.

The dragons swished down to the market.

The people dropped their fruit. “Dragons! Dragons! Dragons!” they screamed.

“Run for your lives!”

“No friends here,” said Damon.

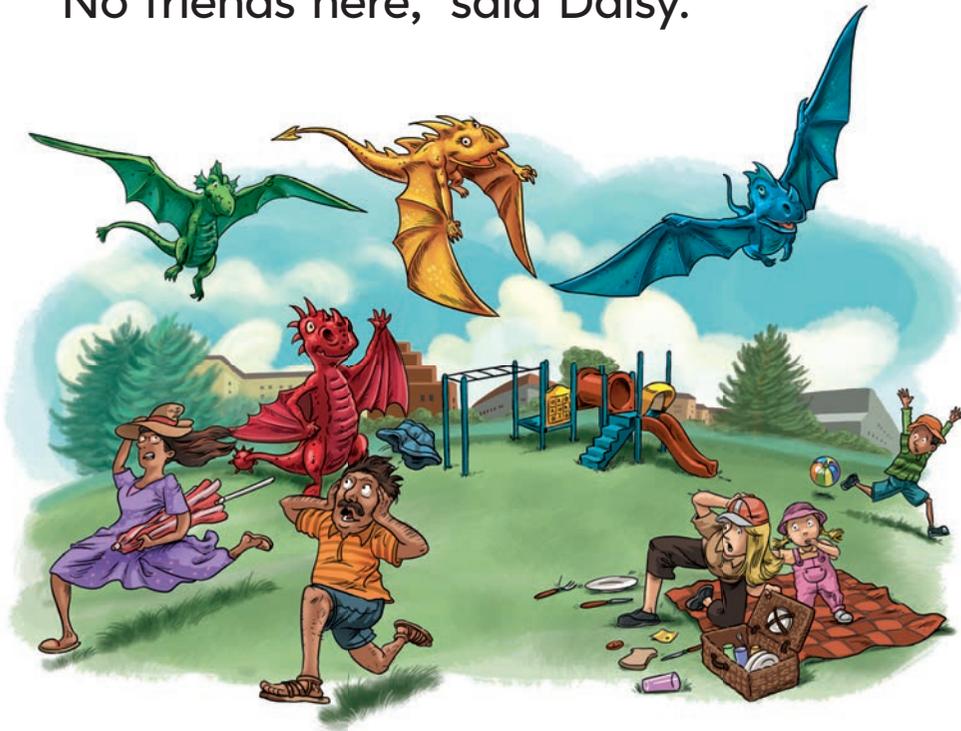

The dragons swooped down
to the park.

The people packed up
their picnics.

“Dragons! Dragons! Dragons!”
they screamed.

“No friends here,” said Daisy.

The dragons flapped
into the library.

The people hid
behind the shelves.

“Dragons! Dragons! Dragons!”
they screamed.

“No friends here,” said David.

The dragons sat
and read some stories.
“The people in this town
are not very friendly,”
said Dora.

“Let’s blow smoke over them,”
said Damon.

“Let’s take their princesses,”
said David.

“No!” said Daisy.

“We want to make friends.
We need to do something else.
Let’s make a plan.”

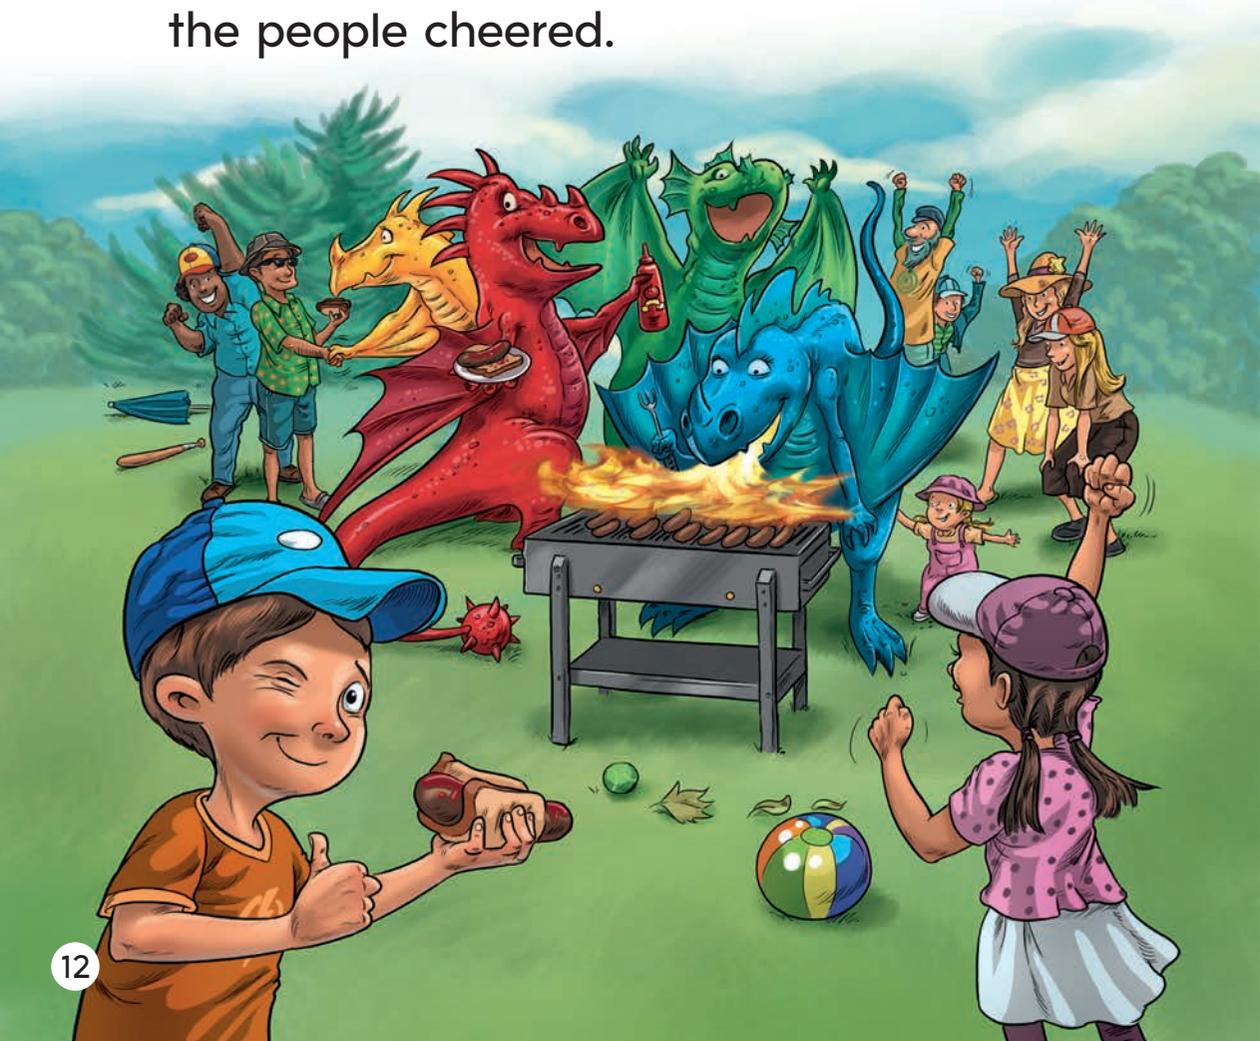

The next day,
when the people
arrived at the park,
the dragons were waiting.
The people stared
at the dragons
and got ready to run.
The dragons drew
a deep breath
and blew a fiery flame.

The sausages sizzled.

“Welcome to our barbecue,”
said the dragons.

“Dragons! Dragons! Dragons!”
the people cheered.

This book is for students to read and enjoy after they have become very familiar with the big book during many shared reading sessions.
